US Navy corpsmen Marines contribute to life-saving efforts in Iraq

As the battle for Ramadi and Fallujah continues near Al Taqaddum, Iraq, members of the Iraqi armed forces conduct counterattack missions as part of the efforts to regain control over the Islamic State

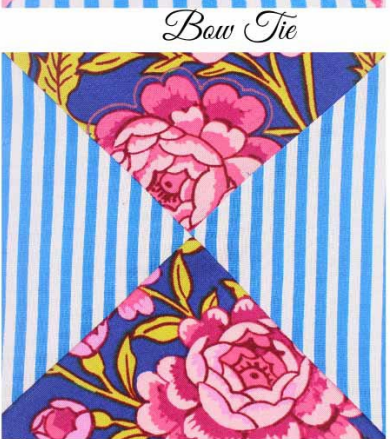

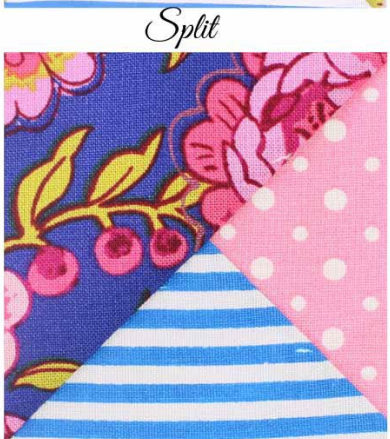

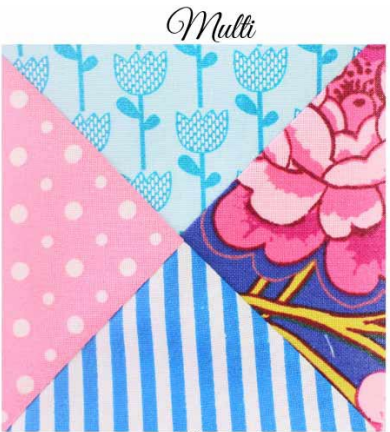

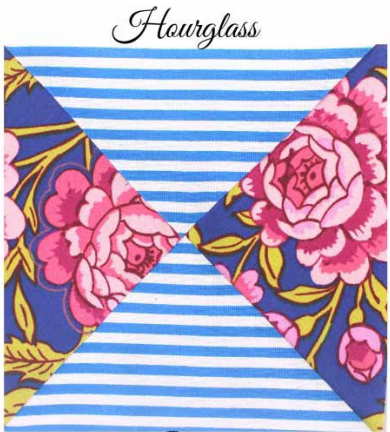

Good Conduct Medal

- 1.Hourglass QST's - Has the same fabric top and bottom so it looks like an hourglass.
- 2.Bow-tie QST's - Made the same as the hourglass type, but turned on its side.
- 3.Multi-colored QST's - Made with four different fabrics
- 4.Split Quarter QST's - Made with three fabrics. (Once again, a rather misleading name!)

The population of Kuwait is 4,369,485. Of this number, roughly 1.45 million are Kuwaiti citizens. The remaining are foreign nationals that come from over 120 different countries, with Indians forming the largest community, followed by Egyptians and then Filipinos.

Kuwait has no renewable freshwater resources. Kuwait has no lakes or rivers, and therefore, the major source of water in Kuwait is the sea, with Kuwait's drinking water supply coming mainly from saltwater desalination plants. These desalination plants are the primary source of fresh water for drinking purposes. They provide 92 percent of water, which equates to about 60 percent of the total water supply.

The Kuwaiti flag is full of meaning. The Kuwaiti flag features horizontal stripes of green, white, and red with a black truncated triangle. A poem by the Arabic poet Ṣafī ad-Dīn al-Ḥill inspired the colors of the flag of Kuwait. In his fakhr ("boasting") poem – written in the 13th century – he wrote: "White are our deeds, black are our battles, / Green are our tents, red are our swords." Officials first used this version of the Kuwaiti flag on the 24th of October 1961.
